populated in the database. I added the javascript to submit the request to the new table through javascript, but when the page is refreshed, it goes back to the old api call. How can I correct this? I am using RESTFUL api. I have a servlet handle the call, but how can I create the call from javascript? The html and jsp part is already done. I have seen many questions in this forum on this topic, but they are related to editing a call when adding or modifying a functionality. I have got a working api call, but have to add a new table with different urls, and need to keep the old call for the existing table structure. Please advice me with a solution that works, and not an architectural suggestion that does not work in my case. A:
